2. Programme Aims & Learning Outcomes

Educational aims of the programme
The aim of the programme – consistent with the LSHTM’s mission to improve health and health equity worldwide – is to provide students with a sound understanding of the theoretical and empirical basis of health promotion, and to equip them with the conceptual and practical skills to design and evaluate health promotion policies and programmes. Health promotion draws on ideas from sociology, psychology, anthropology, education, epidemiology and other disciplines to understand how the health of populations can be maintained and strengthened.
Programme Learning Outcomes
By the end of the programme, students will be expected to achieve the following learning outcomes – drawing on material taught across different elements and assessed in a variety of ways.  Core: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>i) Demonstrate an understanding of the concepts, principles and practices of public health.</li> <li>ii) Demonstrate ability to apply knowledge of the core disciplines of public health (epidemiology, statistics, and social research) to real-world health problems.</li> <li>iii) Develop competence in critically evaluating and communicating research evidence.</li> </ul>

- iv) Demonstrate an understanding of the relationship between research evidence and policy/practice.
- v) Develop skills to produce (design, plan, conduct) a substantive piece of original work that contributes to public health.

Stream Specific:

- i) Develop an understanding of the values and theories which inform health promotion activities.
- ii) Gain a critical appreciation of a range of approaches and methods for promoting health, at the individual, community and population levels.
- iii) Understand and be able to apply knowledge of health promotion to the design and planning of evidence-based health promotion programmes.

Teaching and Learning Strategy

The programme is taught through a variety of teaching methods including: lectures, small group seminars, practical, and groupwork with peers. All elements of the programme have specific learning objectives, with content designed to help students achieve these outcomes. Students are expected to learn through both directed and self-directed study.

Assessment Strategy

Students are assessed through (1) individual module assessments (which may be an essay or other written assignment, short written tests, a groupwork report or presentation, or other method) and (2) an independent project report. These tasks are designed to assess, via the most appropriate method, whether learning objectives have been met.

Contact Time

Student contact time refers to the tutor-mediated time allocated to teaching, provision of guidance and feedback to students. This time includes activities that take place in face-to-face contexts such as on-campus lectures, seminars, demonstrations, tutorials, supervised laboratory workshops, practical classes, project supervision and external fieldwork or visits, as well as where tutors are available for one-to-one discussions and interaction by email. Module contact time will be defined in the individual module specifications and provided to students at the start of their programme.

This definition is based on the one provided by the Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education \(QAA\) Explaining contact hours \(2011\) guidance document, page 4 available here. Student contact time, together with time allocated for independent study and assessment, determines the total student study hours for a module or programme. Although there are separate hours allocated for each of these activities, they should always be clearly linked together to support effective learning.

The London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine (LSHTM) defines high quality contact time as structured, focused, purposeful and interactive.
